

I - As a preamble to the text 'Cymothoa at the heart of homoeopathy'...

The article of R.P. Halm proposed here completes the 'cry of alarm'¹ proposed in the recently published work entitled Homoeopathy in the 21st century: revolution, evolution, or destructureation.

It shows the way of looking at today's homoeopathy of a scientist, Doctor of Pharmacy and of Biology, and also the main founder member of the GIRI (Groupe International de Recherche sur l'Infinitésimal).

If the mention of Cymothoa may be disturbing, surprising, puzzling, or lead to many a question, it cannot be passed over in silence or even evaded in its content: it is now essential to face reality.

This is an objective observation devoid of any partisan or ideological passion, except, undoubtedly, the desire for homoeopathy to keep its efficient aspects and for the mechanisms contributing to its therapeutic action - which are mysterious for the moment - to be determined as accurately as possible.

When, through lack of subsidy, The Monaco International Talks can no longer bring together researchers and doctors or state what is of a 'pseudoscientific' nature and pervades the world of homoeopathy more and more², it seems important to take into account a point of view capable of emphasising inconsistencies and inappropriate reasoning.

This is therefore an appeal to be vigilant and also to remain critical in the face of suggestions, certain of which 'are beyond all comprehension'... The paralysing poison of Cymothoa has paralysed people's minds and capacity for reaction so much that it has come to that so quickly...

As soon as they look modern, the 'marvellous' and 'magic' are still so attractive to those who do not assess their strength, dangers, and deceptive mirages... And yet, this is what is denounced here by René Philippe Halm and is now making a comeback to bring homoeopathy back to a time before that of Hahnemann...

But it must also be said again that, fortunately, the strategies of the living body call upon their hidden resources to locate the danger, deal with it, and restore balance when necessary...

The poison of Cymothoa may also have its antidote and make it possible for the life force to be mobilised again... This is at least the wish we can make so that the Hahnemannian message may be transmitted as accurately as possible...³
